About Outcome Based Education (OBE) & FDP:

Outcome Based Education (OBE) is defined as an approach to the education where students at the end of course, will be able to acquire professional knowledge, skills, abilities, values and on the pathway of transparent expectation of excellent results. There is no single specific type of teaching or learning in OBE. The classes, opportunities, activities, outcomes will all specify the related outcomes of a student. This FDP on relevance of OBE emphasizes on multi-dimensional aspects of teaching in social science that will be effectively explored with the changing times of academic grounds.

Programme Outcomes (POs):

Program Outcomes (POs) are the broad statements that will describe the accomplishment of professional qualities which the programme actually describes and aims at. The Programme Outcomes (POs) may incorporate the inter related subject knowledge, skills and abilities that are to be acquired by the students during their graduation.

Course outcomes (COs):

Course Outcomes are the direct statements that will describe the basic and essential knowledge, abilities that students should possess upon completion of a course. COs are set by the institution, by consulting with the department heads, faculty, students and other stakeholders.
